Insects Injurious to Garden Crops and Showing How to Cope With These Pests

SQUASH-BUGS—All states north of Virginia; farther west extends more to the south. Attacks all members of the cucumber family and some other garden plants. Adult bugs are popularly known as stink-bugs. They are grayish brown, 3-4 inch long; young bugs are greenish, and infest under side of leaves, sucking juices and causing them to wilt. Adults attack not only leaves but tender stems and lay eggs in masses on under side of leaves.

TREATMENT—Place chips or other shelters near vines and collect and kill bugs found beneath them. Look plants over twice a week and crush brownish egg-masses on under surfaces.

SQUASH-VINE BORER—Quite widely distributed. Larva of one of the "clear-wing" moths. Eggs are laid on stems of young vines, especially near the roots, about time vines begin to run; young larva bores into stem and devours interior. When full grown it is nearly or quite an inch long, tapering toward each end. It is whitish, semitransparent, and soft; head a dark brown. Larva leaves plant when full grown and forms cocoon in earth near by, where it remains until following season, when moths appear and lay eggs. Attacked vines droop, look sickly, and eventually die.

TREATMENT—When vines are first attacked cut out worms and destroy, else there is no chance to save plant. A good preventive is to bank up young vines with earth as far out as the first blossoms.

PICKLE-WORM—Melon and cucumber regions. There are two broods each year, the second wintering as pupæ in ground. Moths, having yellowish brown wings with purple reflections, lay eggs on vines and young fruit in early spring; larva eats holes in fruit, thus working its way inside. When full grown it is translucent, yellowish white, tinged green, with yellow head, and is an inch, or more, long.

TREATMENT—Destroy larvæ by hand-picking; destroy infested fruit by gathering and feeding to hogs or by scalding.

POTATO STALK-BORER—West to Missouri and perhaps farther. These small ashen gray beetles appear early in spring and puncture base of potato stem, hollowing out small cavities and laying in each one a single egg. The grubs which hatch are white, with brown heads, and burrow in stalk or branches from early August to September. They pupate near the stalks close to the surface of the soil, and the beetles soon emerge and hibernate in pupal cell.

The larva of a moth also bores into potato stalks.

TREATMENT—Rake up and destroy all vines in the fall as soon as potatoes are dug. Keep down all weeds belonging to this family—jimson-weed, horse-nettle, etc. Use fertilizer to enable plants to mature crop.

Diseases of Field Crops. A General Treatment for Grain Smuts

It has been found that the grain smuts, at least of barley, oats, rye, and wheat, survive the winter on the seed of these grains; and hence any method whereby the spores can be destroyed without affecting the germination of the seed will be more or less successful in preventing the disease in the fields. The following treatments are those recommended:

MODIFIED HOT-WATER TREATMENT—For barley, oats, and wheat soak seed, enclosed in sacks, four hours in cold water; remove, wait four hours, then dip in hot water at 133° F. for five minutes; dry and plant. Water should be at 130° only, for barley, according to Selby (Ohio Bulletin 121).

FORMALIN TREATMENT—For oats, rye, and wheat. Sprinkle seed with a preparation of formalin and water—1 pint formalin to 50 gallons water. Shovel seed over several times and cover with a blanket or heavy canvas for several hours. Plant soon after treatment. Grains may be sprayed with the formalin as they are being put in the drill, but it is not so successful a measure.

BARLEY SMUTS (Ustilago Hordei, U. nuda)—All barley regions. Known also as the covered and the naked barley smuts. The spores of the latter may be scattered by the wind.

LOOSE SMUT OF OATS (Ustilago Avenae)—One of the most destructive smuts, the estimated loss from it in the United States being $18,000,000 annually. Where fields are affected, the spores by harvest time have often blown away to other heads, leaving large areas of affected heads entirely bare.

RYE SMUT (Urocystis occulta)—Attacks leaves and stems. It has been recommended that the seed be treated with hot water (127° F.) for five minutes, and then dried and planted.

LOOSE SMUT OF WHEAT (Ustilago Triticæ)—This smut has no fetid odor as has the following species. It attacks both kernel and chaff, converting the head into a mass of spores.

STINKING SMUT OF WHEAT (Tilletia foetens)—The spores of this smut have a fetid odor, and a small quantity of infected grain will contaminate a whole bin-full, often making it useless for milling. Wheat attacked by this species grows as tall as unaffected grain. The kernels only become diseased, and usually all in the head will be affected. Granaries and implements may be disinfected with copper sulphate (2 pounds to 10 gallons of water), articles treated being sprayed or washed.

WHEAT RUST (Puccinia graminis, P. rubigo-vera)—The only chance of prevention for this disease yet known is to plant resistant varieties and keep farm clean of volunteer wheat.

CORN SMUT (Ustilago Zeæ)—This wide-spread disease attacks the ear, tassels, leaves, brace-roots and sucker-shoots, and produces the well-known black lumps on corn in the field.

TREATMENT—Cutting and burning the smut bolls before they burst will aid in its control. Every possible means should be used to control this disease, as it seems to be constantly growing worse.

No Experimenting Here!

Many persons have had their eyes injured or ruined through wearing glasses fitted by incompetent opticians and spectacle vendors. Don't. Think of what a serious handicap bad eyes are in the pursuit of business success or the enjoyment of every day comfort. If you can't read any size type easily; if your eyes tire quickly from reading or sewing; if they smart or pain; if you suffer with dull headaches, you should wear glasses—and this is a safe place to secure them.

Our optician won't experiment on you or "trust to luck." His method of testing and examining the eyes is as infallible as can be—impossible to have glasses fitted more accurately, no matter how much you pay a high priced specialist. There is no other department of the store in which we are more positive in guaranteeing satisfaction to patrons.

Special values in gold-filled EYEGLASSES and SPECTACLES.

You can save about one-half the regular cost. "WORLD'S FAIR" SMOKED GLASSES—to protect your eyes from the sun's glare, only 25c. We clean and repair watches and clocks at a moderate price. We sell Wedding and Engagement Rings from $2 up.

Good Roads Should be Every Farmers Hobby

The condition of the roadways of any locality, whether in the city or country, largely determines the value of its property. A good road is essential, not only for pleasurable driving, but also for the marketing of the various products of the farm.

In sections having very poor roads it frequently happens that the farmers are unable to take advantage of the favorable changes in the market, owing to inability to haul their crops whenever they desire.

The cost of moving farm products and supplies averages, (According to calculations made by the United States Department of Agriculture) on all our country roads, twenty-five cents per ton per mile, while in the "good-roads" districts the average is only about eight cents—a difference which in the aggregate amounts to more than the entire annual expenditures of the National Government. Whereas, one-twelfth of the farm value of the agricultural products of the United States would be sufficient to pay for hauling over good roads to shipping points, the cost of hauling over roads as they are is equal to one-quarter of the farm value. The destruction of perishable products for want of access to markets, the failure to reach markets when prices are at a maximum, and the enforced idleness of men and draft animals during seasons of impassable roads, constitute a "bad-road tax" upon the industry of the nation generally and upon that of the farmer directly.

How to Maintain Permanent Pastures

In most localities there is more or less land that is not suitable for cultivation and that must be utilized in the form of a permanent pasture. In any case it is usually desirable to have more or less land in this form. The value of such pastures will depend very largely upon getting the varieties best adapted to the conditions and upon the degree of care that is given them. They are subject to the same damaging effects of extreme climatic conditions as are the permanent meadows, and the same remedy is applicable. The sod-bound condition, especially in the blue grass regions, is even more liable to occur in pastures than in mowing lands. The method of spreading by underground runners, that is characteristic of some of the best pasture grasses, contributes largely to the development of such a condition.

The disking of such pastures, followed by light seeding of clover and the application of manure, as in the case of mowing lands, is the best method of improving them. The native pastures may also be very greatly increased in productiveness by thoroughly cutting them up with a disk and seeding with plants adapted to the various conditions.

As in the case of mowing lands, a greater productiveness may be secured by growing a mixture of plants for pasture. The variety thus afforded also makes the product of greater value.

SEED MIXTURES FOR PASTURES

I. FOR HUMID CLIMATES HAVING SEVERE WINTERS

Medium Red Clover.....	3 lbs
Kentucky Blue Grass	8 lbs
Orchard Grass.....	8 lbs
Smooth Brome Grass.....	10 lbs

(b)

Medium Red Clover.....	2 lbs
White Clover.....	2 lbs
Orchard Grass.....	8 lbs
Meadow Fescue.....	5 lbs
Smooth Brome Grass.....	8 lbs

(c) For high, rather thin soils :

Mammoth Red Clover	3 lbs
Kentucky Blue Grass.....	8 lbs
Orchard Grass.....	8 lbs
Smooth Brome Grass	10 lbs

(d) For Low, Wet Lands :

Alsike Clover.....	4 lbs
Red Top.....	6 lbs
Timothy	4 lbs

All the components of Mixture (a) start very early in the spring, and the clover and brome grass will remain green and continue to grow during quite dry weather.

II. FOR HUMID CLIMATES FARTHER SOUTH

(a) For Light Sandy Soils :

Smooth Brome Grass.....	15 lbs
Tall Oat Grass.....	15 lbs
Hairy Vetch	15 lbs

(c) For Low, Wet Lands :

Alsike Clover.....	4 lbs
Red Top.....	4 lbs
Large Water Grass.....	4 lbs

(b) For Richer, Heavier, Well-underdrained Soils :

Mixture (a), below the snow line, will afford growing pasture for almost the entire year.	Orchard Grass.....	10 lbs	One report from the South mentions orchard grass as not being relished by the stock, but as a rule they are fond of it.
	Tall Fescue.....	10 lbs
	Rescue Grass.....	10 lbs
	Medium Red Clover.....	3 lbs
	(or Hairy Vetch, 12 lbs)

All the foregoing mixtures are best sown at the beginning of the fall rains.

III. FOR SEMI-ARID REGIONS

Meadow Fescue.....	10 lbs	Medium Red Clover.....	2 lbs
Orchard Grass	12 lbs	Alfalfa.....	6 lbs
Smooth Brome Grass.....	15 lbs

(a) Prepare the ground thoroughly, and seed with a press drill early in the spring for the more northerly regions, and in the fall, farther south.

(b) The same mixture may also be sown advantageously on the native pastures, after first thoroughly sacrificing them with a disk or other effective implement.

Insects Injurious to Garden Crops and Showing How to Cope With These Pests

BEET APHIS—Washington, Oregon. Has done immense damage on the Pacific Coast. Insect is small, pale yellow or whitish, and covered with a flocculent mass much like the covering of the wooly aphid. Infests several wild plants; yarrow, knot-weed and grasses—both native and introduced.

TREATMENT—In districts where present do not put beets on new ground nor continue beets in ground where it has appeared.

SUGAR BEET WEBWORM, GARDEN WEBWORM—These webworms are widely distributed. They feed on the leaves of many garden plants, each individual under a separate web.

TREATMENT—Arsenical sprays will control them, as the web is not dense enough to prevent entrance of poison.

ZEBRA CATERPILLAR—Distributed over United States and quite common on garden crops. Brilliantly marked with black and yellow and has a red head. Dr. Forbes has recorded about forty food plants for this species, including garden and field crops, Ornamental plants, and trees.

TREATMENT—Arsenical sprays will control this insect. Where arsenites are not desirable, use pyrethrum or hellebore, dry or mixed with water.

CABBAGE FLEA-BEETLE—Many states. Especially destructive in larval state to cabbage, turnips, and radishes feeding on roots; beetles also do appreciable damage by riddling the leaves with holes. Adult beetle about one-tenth inch long, black, with two yellowish stripes which are sometimes broken into four yellow spots. Hibernates in this stage in sheltered places in fields.

TREATMENT—Endeavor to control beetles with arsenical or Bordeaux sprays. Destroy all leaves and rubbish in fields in fall.

STRIPED CUCUMBER-BEETLE—All states east of Rocky Mountains. Attacks melon, cucumber, and squash vines in both larval and adult stages. Many other plants are fed upon by the beetle. Larvæ are subterranean, feeding on roots of plants of the cucumber family; adults have been found feeding on beans, peas, and ripe apples, on leaves, silk, pollen and unripe kernels of corn, and on several wild plants. Beetle is yellow, striped with black; hibernates.

TREATMENT—Arsenical sprays must be used very early, as later the beetles seem to feed but little. Trap crops of early squash may be used to protect cucumber plants, or plants may be covered with netted boxes until they are well out of the ground; plants may be treated with Paris green either wet or dry. If trap crops are used, plant main crop as late as possible.

Birds and Their Effect on Agriculture

The relative benefit and injury received by the farmer from some of our common species of birds varies according to circumstances; yet in some cases the injury done to growing crops, or the protection against insect pests afforded, is so positive as to admit of no question. Take, for instance, the crow-blackbirds and the crows. They work both positive injury and positive advantage to the farmer, and so long as they are not overabundant it is likely that they are worth more than they cost. If too numerous, of course their numbers must be reduced. Then, again, take the diet of nesting birds—almost exclusively animal. It has been estimated that the passerine (sparrow-like) birds of Eastern Nebraska, by their destruction of locusts in the nesting season, save crops to the value of $1,744 a day.

The United States Department of Agriculture declares the following twenty-five species of birds decidedly beneficial and worthy of the fullest protection because of their consumption of insects, reptiles, rodents, and noxious weed seed: Marsh-hawk, Swainson's Hawk, Ferruginous Rough-leg, Squirrel-hawk, Sparrow-hawk, Robin, Bluebird, Chickadee, House-wren, Rose-breasted Grosbeak, Song-sparrow, Chipping-sparrow, Tree-sparrow, Baltimore Oriole, Meadow-lark, Flicker, Downy Woodpecker, Hairy Woodpecker, Black-billed and Yellow-billed Cuckoos, Barn Owl, and the Long-eared, Short-eared, Barred, and Screech Owls.

Five are distinctly injurious and should be destroyed, viz., English Sparrow, Duck-hawk, Goshawk, Cooper's Hawk, and the Sharp-shinned Hawk.

The Hessian Fly -- How to Detect it and How to Get Rid of It

(Cecidomyia destructor)—All wheat states. Adult fly is a dark colored, two-winged gnat, 1-8 inch. Lays eggs in fall on upper surface of wheat leaf, or, in spring, beneath sheath. Maggots burrow into stem, spring brood remaining in portion above ground, fall brood going lower. Ravages are detected by stooling-out of wheat, a darkening and broadening of leaves, absence of central stem, and a gradual yellowing and dying of plants. Damp springs favor the insect. Its emergence is retarded by drought, so that late sowing may fail as a remedy after summers with little rain.

TREATMENT— Delay sowing of wheat until after time for the fly to lay its eggs. Farm practice as to date of sowing is in some states as follows: Northern Ohio, September 10th; Central Ohio, September 25th; Southern Ohio, October 10th; Central Maryland, September 26th to October 5th; Northern Delaware, October 1st; New York, September 20th to 25th; Michigan, September 1st or not until October 1st. Clean cultivation, burning of stubble, rotation of crops.

Insects Injurious to Garden Crops and Showing How to Cope With These Pests

POTATO FLEA-BEETLE—Many states. "This small, blackish, faintly shining, minutely punctured species lives as a larva, so far as known, only on roots of solanaceous plants—potato, tomato, egg-plant, tobacco, etc." (Forbes.) The beetles feed on these plants and many others, almost all garden plants being attacked.

TREATMENT—Bordeaux mixture has proved a first-class repellent for flea-beetles of all kinds. Mixture may be prepared in usual way, and Paris green added to destroy other pests; coat vines well.

STRIPED BLISTER-BEETLE—Florida to Canada, and west to Rocky Mountains. Attacks principally potato and tomato, but feeds on many other plants, cultivated and wild. Beetle is yellow, with four or six black stripes, and is well known to most farmers and gardeners; often called "the old-fashioned potato-beetle." Larva probably feeds on grasshoppers' eggs.

TREATMENT—Arsenites may be used, or the beetles may be driven from the fields as described under Nuttall's blister-beetle.

COLORADO POTATO-BEETLE—All states; the worst of potato pests. Stout, yellowish beetle, with ten black stripes on wing-covers; lays orange-colored eggs beneath leaves. The reddish black-marked larvæ are voracious feeders. Several generations each year; hibernates in both pupal and adult stages.

TREATMENT—Hand-picking of eggs and insects Thorough Paris-green spraying. Begin treating the pests as "soon as they appear", and keep at it.

Infection of the Omasum in Cattle.

SYMPTOMS—The appetite is diminished, rumination occurs at irregular intervals, the body temperature is uneven, the animal is feverish, and it will grunt as if in pain. Bloating sometimes occurs and the bowels are constipated. The animal soon falls away in flesh, the appetite is lost, it becomes weak, presents an unthrifty appearance, walks stiffly, and arches the back. The disease may last several days and during its course the animal becomes delirious, or merges into drowsiness or stupor. Chronic cases sometimes continue for months. When recovery takes place, a diarrhea is usually present, the feces containing black particles with polished surfaces, looking as if they had been baked.

TREATMENT—The preventive treatment, consists in avoiding the causes. Plenty of salt should be allowed. When the disease manifests itself, a purgative of Epsom salts (from 1 to 3 pounds in 1 gallon or more of water) should be given. One dram of powdered nux vomica may be given three times a day. Hypodermic injections of strychnine, eserine, or pilocarpine are very useful in this disease. When convalescence begins, the animal must be allowed moderate exercise and must have food of a laxative nature.

Insects Injurious to Garden Crops and Showing How to Cope With These Pests

BEAN LADYBIRD, WESTERN BEAN-BEETLE---Western States; is working its way eastward. Serious enemy to bean crop in West. Beetles 1-4 inch long, yellowish brown, with four black spots on each wing-cover; larvæ slug-like and yellow, feeding on under side of leaf; eggs laid in same place.

TREATMENT—Kerosene emulsion under-spray will help in controlling them; hand-picking is still better.

BEAN LEAF-BEETLE---Gulf and Atlantic States. Somewhat resembles striped cucumber-beetle. Strips leaves, except mid-rib and larger veins.

TREATMENT—Clean culture, destroying especially all tick-trefoil and bush clover. Arsenical spray harmless to plant if used very very early; hand-picking, in small gardens, successful, as beetles, larvæ and eggs may be secured.

DESTRUCTIVE GREEN PEA-LOUSE---States north of North Carolina and east of Wisconsin. Greenish plant-lice, occurring in great numbers on peas, some clovers, and several other crops. They multiply very rapidly.

TREATMENT—Brush vines and follow up with cultivator to bury the lice.

NUTTALL'S BLISTER-BEETLE—North-western States. Bright metallic-green or blue-green, elongate and narrow. Sporadic in attacks, usually most abundant after a grasshopper year; feeds on legumes and some other plants.

TREATMENT—Larvæ of this beetle feed on the eggs of the Rocky Mountain locust and do much to hold it in check; unless very destructive it might be good policy not to destroy them. Can be controlled by beating into pans of kerosene and water or by driving from the fields, going up and down the rows, brushing the plants always in the same direction. This treatment will serve for all blister-beetles.

PALE-STRIPED FLEA-BEETLE—From New York to Colorado. Feeds on beets and many other plants in the garden.

RED-HEADED FLEA-BEETLE—East of the Rocky Mountains. Feeds on several garden plants, including beets, and on gooseberry, grape, and pear among cultivated fruit. Flea-beetles eat small ragged holes in the leaves of the plants on which they are feeding, and often do considerable damage. The larvæ have been found feeding on the roots of wild plants, and in one instance in Illinois those of the pale-striped species on the roots of corn. The life history of the flea-beetle is not yet known. The adult has been found feeding on smartweed.

TREATMENT—Arsenical sprays or Bordeaux mixture will control beetles when found on the leaves.

Horse Colics. Causes, Symptoms and Treatment.

FLATULENT OR WIND COLIC

CAUSES—Wind colic is due to foods that are easily fermented, sudden changes in the food, eating when tired, too severe work after a hearty meal, drinking a large quantity of water after feeding, improper mastication of the feed, or any of the common causes of indigestion.

SYMPTOMS—At first the horse is restless and has colicky pains. The abdomen on the right side soon becomes distended with gas, and when we place the ear to the right flank we can hear loud intestinal sounds, rather metallic in character. As the swelling increases, the animal becomes anxious and has great difficulty in breathing; the nostrils are dilated, eyes prominent, and it staggers. Sometimes the horse regurgitates gas, vents wind, and passes some feces. Unless relieved, death will take place very quickly, owing to the pressure on the lungs by the distended viscera and the absorption of poisonous gases by the vessels in the walls of the intestines, or to the rupture of the stomach or intestines.

TREATMENT—The preventive treatment is important and consists in proper methods of feeding. We can facilitate the escape of gas by way of the rectum by giving cold water injections. The quickest relief is obtained by puncturing the distended intestine with the trocar and cannula, nor should one put off doing this until too late. We must keep the horse from throwing himself down or becoming injured. The pain in some cases is violent. Fluid extract "cannabis indica" in $\frac{1}{4}$ -ounce dose and repeat in an hour or two is useful in keeping the animal quiet. It is always well to give a cathartic in order to drive out the irritating substance, and it is well to diet and rest the animal for at least a day after it has recovered from the attack. A quart of raw linseed and 2 ounces of turpentine is a useful cathartic. Other drugs that may be used hypodermically are pilocarpine, eserine, barium chloride, and arecolin. One should allow the animal to run in a grass plot or give him a large, comfortable stall when sick, for if in much pain it may injure itself.

COLIC DUE TO OVERLOADING OF THE STOMACH

CAUSES—This form of colic may occur in horses that are overfed, when the owner is fitting them for sale or for the show ring. It may result when the horse gets into the grain bin and eats a large quantity of grain.

SYMPTOMS—The animal shows evidence of colicky pains, but is not so restless at first as in other forms of colic. A flatulent condition of the stomach and intestines is usually present. The expression of the face is anxious; the animal tries to vomit, and some times does, small amounts of alimentary matter coming out of the nostrils. In colic due to overloading, the horse takes unusual positions (the dog sitting position is one), in order to ease the pain or pressure on the lungs. A rupture of the walls of the stomach is always to be feared in overloading. As a rule, this accident can be recognized by the animal becoming more quiet, the surface of the body cold, and the pulse small and weak. When the disease is about to terminate fatally, the expression is anxious, the respirations quick, pulse imperceptible, and the mucous membranes pale; the animal dies very quickly. In some cases death does not occur for several days after the rupture has occurred.

TREATMENT—Keep the horse as quiet as possible, as there is danger of rupture of the stomach if the animal throws itself down or rolls violently. The following drugs are useful in keeping it quiet: Fluid extract of cannabis indica, morphine, and chloral hydrate. Flatulence should be treated the same as in flatulent colic. Bulky drenches must not be used, and the animal should be subjected for a few days to fasting.

SPASMODIC COLIC

CAUSES—Nervous, highly bred horses are more susceptible to spasmodic colic than coarse, lymphatic animals. The malady may be classed as a nervous colic, as irritation to the nerves of the intestines by cold, both internal (cold food and water) and external (wading frozen streams, etc.,) will produce cramp in the intestines. Indigestible food and foreign bodies also may cause it.

SYMPTOMS—The attack occurs very suddenly and the pain is severe, and of short duration, but returns in the form of successive attacks. The peristaltic movement of the intestines is increased and we hear loud intestinal sounds. The horse usually makes frequent efforts to urinate. This is caused by the irritation being communicated to the urinary apparatus and must not be mistaken for kidney trouble.

TREATMENT—All that is necessary in this form of colic is to give the animal comfortable quarters where it can not injure itself. In cold weather it must be covered with warm blankets and if necessary the limbs rubbed and bandaged. Morphine given hypodermically is almost a specific for this colic. Fluid extract of cannabis indica may be given (in from 2 to 4 dram doses) and repeated in an hour if necessary, or laudanum (1½ ounces) may be given in a little oil. If the colicky pains do not disappear in a short time the following ball may be given: Powdered aloes (6 drams), powdered ginger (2 drams), extract of belladonna (½ dram); mix and give as one dose.

COLICS DUE TO OBSTRUCTION OF THE INTESTINES

In colic due to constipation the symptoms are not well marked and may run along for several days before colicky pains are manifested. The pains are generally very mild, the horse lies down more than usual, and does not eat. The abdomen is more or less distended with gas, and if the oiled hand is introduced into the rectum it is found to be filled with hard feces.

TREATMENT—Constipation is very often due to feeding too much roughage and can be largely prevented by balancing the ration with grain and giving the horse sufficient exercise to keep it in good health. If the colic has not been neglected, enemas and cathartics (linseed or castor oil) will relieve the animal. Laxative food and plenty of water should be given till recovery is complete. Eserine strychnine, pilocarpine, and arecolin given hypodermically are useful in this form of colic.

“THE OLD STAND BY”

Miscellaneous Remedies

APPENDICITIS. Wring cloth out of hot water, then put on it 8 or 10 drops of spirits of turpentine. Apply this to the afflicted parts as hot as it can be borne; and renew with another as soon as it is cool. Continue with this until complete relief is obtained. Sometimes it has to be continued a whole night. This disperses the pus that is forming.

After relief is obtained cover the bowels, the parts affected, with a thin cotton cloth, and spread over this a thin cotton cloth that has been wrung out of coal oil.

During this treatment give the patient the following: Pour a teaspoonful of the extract of Wild Yam into a tumbler two-thirds full of water and take a teaspoonful of the mixture every half hour until relieved, then diminish the dose to once every hour or two hours till cured. Dr. Pots, of New York, says: “This is the best remedy that we have for this disease.”

If this course is pursued, it will be very seldom that patients will have to undergo a surgical operation.

MEMBRANOUS CROUP. The vapor of unslaked lime is an old domestic remedy that has been very successfully used in the treatment of this disease. The lime is to be slaked in a vessel in such a way that the patient can breathe in the vapor.

An old medical author writes: I often cause the false membrane in this disease to be expelled by first giving the patient a warm bath. Then cause him to breathe the vapor of slaking lime, by slaking a lump of quick lime at intervals of fifteen minutes, the patient holding the head over the vessel so the vapor will pass into the throat.—Dr. H. G. Bowen.

SALT AND VINEGAR A GREAT CURE FOR THIS DISEASE. The vapor or fumes of it seem to possess the power of dissolving and loosening the false membrane in the throat.

The remedy may be used in the following manner: To a quart of strong vinegar add one pint of salt. Woolen cloths are to be saturated with the solution and kept constantly hot and held to the mouth of the patient so as to inhale the vapor and heat from them.

This simple remedy has cured the worst cases of membranous croup where patients have been pronounced incurable by doctors.

Miscellaneous Remedies

QUINSY. Apply to the neck a cloth wet with coal oil, and gargle the throat with the same. A repetition of this treatment every three hours will soon relieve the patient.

THE OIL OF PEPPERMINT A NEVER-FAILING CURE. Those who have used this remedy pronounce it a positive and speedy cure for quinsy. It is to be applied externally around the neck and throat.

CHOLERA MORBUS. Wring a cloth out of coal oil and apply to the lower part of the stomach, and at the same time take internally one tablespoonful of salt to one-half a tumblerful of water and as much good vinegar and one teaspoonful of ground black pepper. Dose, two teaspoonfuls every twenty minutes.

LUNG DISEASES. Saturate a cloth with coal oil and bind it on the lungs at night and repeat from time to time whenever there is any soreness of the lungs. And take internally three times a day ten drops of coal oil on sugar.

Patients have been cured of consumption with this remedy after the physicians had pronounced them beyond the hope of recovery.

SUN-STROKE. A European method of relieving sun-stroke is to apply a mustard plaster to the stomach. Then wring a cloth out of coal oil, after which wet it with cold water, and apply to the neck and occasionally renew.

NERVOUS HEADACHE. To a teacupful of water add one teaspoonful of the essence of peppermint; saturate a cloth with it and apply to the head and temples. For many persons this will give very quick relief. As soon as the cloth becomes dry wet the cloth again.

CAMPHOR AND BLACK PEPPER is Dr. Suda's remedy, which he states is a very superior one.

Wet a cloth with the spirits of camphor and sprinkle over it very thickly with black pepper and apply to the forehead and temples. If relief is not soon obtained, renew the application, or at least wet the cloth again with the camphor.

ALCOHOL. The simple application of alcohol applied to the forehead and temples, and renewed occasionally, will cause some people very speedy relief when nothing else will.

MAX JENNINGS

WATCH MAKER, JEWELER

and OPTICIAN

My many years of practical experience will bear out the above four words. I understand the construction of a watch just as thoroughly as it is possible for man to know anything. When I fit your eyes for glasses I do it by a scientific method, and not by guess work. I understand the jewelry business from A to Z. I CARRY A FULL LINE.

My Prices are Right and I Want Your Trade.

Dr. Geo. J. Ward's Pharmacy

Is a Modern Up-To-Date Drug Store

We are in the drug business and we take an interest in it and study to keep it up-to-date. We sell salts and senna, calomel and jallop and the old fashioned patent medicine because they are all called for, but we also keep and sell all the newer remedies of merit which are constantly being introduced, and aim to know all there is to be known about them. So if you should want, or want to know about anything in the line of Drugs, Medicine, Toilet Articles, Perfumery, Optical and Photo Goods and Physician Supplies, come to or write to Dr. Geo. J. Ward, St. Clair, Mich. We also put up a line of domestic remedies among which is a safe and sure CORN CURE PLASTER which is the best thing in use for the cure of corns, warts, bunions or callouses, which, if you cannot obtain of your local druggist, send 10 cents to me and I will send you a package by return mail.

WOOD FIBER PLASTER

Constructive Progress in Building has at last reached that perfection so long desired by architects, builders and owners, by the use of WOOD FIBER PLASTER for interior walls and ceilings. Practical use has proven that WOOD FIBER PLASTER WILL NOT CRACK, crumble, fall off, become loosened by water, concussion, contraction or expansion, settling of foundations, blows, jars or other forces. WOOD FIBER PLASTER is a perfect non-conductor of sound, heat, cold, and electricity experiments demonstrating the above qualities, and every conceivable test have been made.
